ACCORDING to a decree in the case whereby Polk Place goes into the possession of the heirs at law of President Polk, the heirs consent that the cost of a lot in Mount Olivet Cemetery, Nashville, and the removal of the remains of James K. MRS. CYRILDA GIVIDEN a widow 58 years of age met a frightful death by being struck by an L. and N. engine twenty miles this side of LaGrange. The unfortunate woman was returning from her garden, which lies just across the railroad track from her home, and failed to hear the approach of a train which was going at the rate of forty-five miles an hour. When the engine first saw her she was but a few feet away, and the signal was instantly given, but it was too late, and the next moment the engine struck her, hurling the lifeless body fully twenty feet from the rails. When the train had been stopped, Conductor Price and his crew returned, and carefully placing the remains in a blanket, carried them to her house, two hundred yards away. Every bone in the body had been broken, and the flesh was entirely torn from one arm, presenting a ghastly and sickening appearance.

George W. Childs's Rebuke.

When Mr. George W. Childs was in San Francisco he joined the party of a visiting editorial association in an excursion down the bay. A loud young man began to tell stories of remarkable newspaper experiences to everybody who would listen to him. Finally he turned his attention to Mr. Childs, who was sitting reflectively by the rail, observing the harbor's points of interest. The young man related an unusually doubtful story of adventure, and Mr. Childs asked him:

"What paper were you on then?"
"The Philadelphia Public Ledger," said the boaster confidently.
"What position did you hold?"
"Oh, I was an editorial writer, but when there was any news assignment involving extra risk and responsibility I was always asked to take it. I was on The Public Ledger many years."
"Singular that we should not have met," said Childs, "I've been on the paper a long time myself."
"What position do you hold?" asked the news-gathering hero, his voice losing much of its confidence.
"I'm the editor and proprietor."

On and after July 1st, paid locals will be inserted in THE LEDGER at 25 cents per line for each insertion.
